

Ghost Dancer

K H Á N H B R I C E N G U Y Ê N

Ghost Dancer, the London Fashion Week debut AW25 collection by Khanh Brice Nguyen, explores the tension between visibility and invisibility—the instinct to hide and the longing to be recognized.

Shaped by French and Vietnamese cultures, Khanh Brice Nguyen has explored identity through queerness, artistry, and self-expression. This journey of self-discovery has profoundly shaped their design philosophy, where clothing becomes a medium for storytelling. Khanh's work merges fashion with the worlds of comics and dance, creating garments that feel like characters. With years of experience crafting intricate knitwear, their approach to design is both deeply technical and emotionally driven.

Ghost Dancer is a personal reflection on stepping into the light, shedding layers of fear, and embracing one's true self. Through movement, texture, and transparency, this collection embodies the fragile yet powerful act of revealing oneself. Diaphanous materials suggest the tension between exposure and protection, while structured silhouettes hint at the armor we build around ourselves. The collection evolves from ghostly veils and flowing forms into a process of shedding, revealing the body beneath.

Each of the 18 looks is crafted entirely from knitwear and made in the designer's London studio, reinforcing their dedication to craftsmanship and material innovation. Styling by Nathan Klein enhances and refines the collection's narrative, while choreography by Benjamin Jonsson expands the vision, bringing the garments to life in a physical, emotive way. Together, they reclaim fashion as a language of presence, revealing identity through form and motion.
